

Harry Moser Founder, Reshoring Initiative

Harry Moser, founder of the Reshoring Initiative and former president of Charmilles Technologies Corporation (now GF AgieCharmilles), grew up experiencing the glory of U.S. manufacturing.

Moser's father - a manager, and grandfather - a foreman, worked for the once sprawling Singer Sewing Machine Company factory in Elizabeth, New Jersey. Moser himself spent summer vacations during high school and college working at the plant.

But that was then. The Singer factory is now gone as are a long list of other American manufacturing plants and companies due to decades of offshoring. Not wanting to see even more U.S. manufacturing jobs disappear, Moser decided to start the Reshoring Initiative to show companies that U.S. manufacturing is still profitable.
